MR. BALFOUR KEEPS POST.

OPPOSITION WEAKENS.

Attack To Be Renewed-The Premier's Refusal to Resign.

London, July 24.—The Cabinet will remain in office. The debate in the House which followed Mr. Balfour's refusal to resign was unexpectedly closed, and the Government motion to adjourn was carried without a division, the Opposition for tactical reasons deciding not to press the attack to a vote. It is estimated that had a division taken place the Government would have had a majority of from ninety, to one hundred. Several Conservatives made their first appearance in the House this year.

Although it had been generally recognized that the Premier had no intention of resigning, there was great eagerness on all sides to hear the terms of his statement. The House was literally packed. Every gallery available to the peers and the public was crowded, and there had not been such an attendance of members in the life of the present Parliament.

Mr. Balfour, who was heartily cheered by his supporters on rising, somewhat tried the patience of his hearers by a long disquisition on how former administrations had ignored defeats eimiliar to that of Thursday. He said that such incidents had never been regarded as ground for resignation or dissolution, and announced that the Government did not propose either to resign or to dissolve Parliament because of Thursday's occurrence. The Premier considered that it would be a grave evil if the tenure of Ministers was made dependent on such votes as that of Thursday. He hoped the practice would never prevail of allowing a Government, united in itself and possessing the confidence of the majority of the House, to abandon its post merely in consequence of such a vote

Mr. Balfour sat down without referring to the remaining business of the session, and Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, the Liberal leader, immediately asked for an opportunity to discuss the Premier's statement. The Opposition, he said, did not propose to proceed with Bir Edward Grey's proposed vote of censure, which obviously was superseded by the occurrence of Thursday. They wanted to discuss the conduct of the government regarding the bappenings of last week.

ohn Redmond, the leader of the Irish Nationalists, took a similar line, and the heated tone of both leaders indicated that the government would have to face the most determined epposition during the balance of the session. Ultimately, by arrangement with Mr. Balfour, the chief government whip, Sir Alexander Acland-Hood, formally moved the adjournment, and Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman opened the debate with a stirring attack on the govern-

Mr. Redmond followed, and in a few fervid phrases characterized the Premier's action as contemptible. The Opposition, he said, ought to band together and make the continued life of this government impossible. Speaking for the Nationalists, Mr. Redmond promised the gov-ernment that they would neither ask nor give quarter, but would fight day and night so as to make short work of "this government of threds and patches."

Ambassador Reid and the Russian and Austrian Ambassadors were seated in the diplo-inatio gallery during Mr. Balfour's statement.

Body of Paul Jones at Last Rests in American Soil.

Annapolis, Md., July 24.-In a brick vault in the grounds of the Naval Academy lies the body of John Paul Jones. With the simple ceremony attending the landing of the body from the cruiser Brooklyn, the expedition authorized to accomplish its transfer from the Paris cemetery, which had been its resting place for more than a century, has completed its task. The formal national reception of the body, with appropriate exercises, is reserved until it shall be placed in the naval chapel now being erected near the site of the temporary vauit.

The work to-day consisted of the removal of the body from the Brooklyn to the naval tug Standish, and from that to a float moored to the shore. There jackles placed it in a hearse, which was escorted by a cortege of marines, jackies and midshipmen.

At eight o'clock the guns of the Brooklyr comed a salute to Rear Admiral Sands, superintendent of the Naval Academy. The shore batteries replied, and as they did so the naval tug Standish cast off and proceeded to the ooklyn, lying five miles off. The saluting batteries were kept busy.

The Standish made fast to the Brooklyn shortly before 9 o'clock. The body of the dead admiral was hoisted from its position on the "half deck" by a boat crane and carried to the starboard side, where another crane lowered it to the after deck of the tug. Sixteen jackies went over the side of the Brooklyn and placed the coffin on a catafalque, where it was covered by the flag of General Porter, over which was spread the American Jack. Then the jackles stood at attention in a square around the bier.

The unsheathed sword of John Paul Jones now the property of Commander Nicholson of der constant guard of a marine.

Rear Admiral Sigsbee and his ship officers went aboard the tug, which took its course shins and as it was making this run guns from every ship gave the fifteen gun

As the body was being transferred the marines of the squadron were sent ashore in small boats. These reached shore first and formed an imposing guard, drawn up in double line on the sea wall of the basin of the Naval Academy. The Standish landed at a barge over which an arch of American and French flags had been erected. She touched shore exactly at 10 o'clock, and thirteen minutes later the body was waiting, on either side of which were the honorary palibearers, on the right side being Rear Admiral Sands and Captains "Illey and Reeder. of Admiral Sigsbee's fleet; on the left was Captain Gervis of the French cruiser, and Rear Admiral Davis and Captain Taussig. The Naval Academy band played Chopin's funeral march as the body was placed in the hearse by eight stalwart jackies.

The cortege began the march at 10:20, with the band leading and the marines and jackies preceding the hearse, which was followed by a battalion of midshipmen from the academy, Admiral Sigsbee bringing up the rear.

When the procession began to move a sh battery fired minute guns to the number of fifteen. Around the vault a huge square was formed on three sides by the sailors and marines, the fourth being occupied by the hearse and midshipmen.

After the body had been removed from the hearse and placed on a car Chaplain Clark, of the Naval Academy, assisted by Fleet Chap-of the Naval Academy, assisted by Fleet Chap-lain Bayard, read a portion of the Episcopal funeral service and offered a prayer.

As the car was moved to the vault the band played a funeral march. After it had been placed in position a squad of marines fired three volleys, and taps was sounded by the buglers. The cortege was then dismissed, the entire ex-ercises on shore having occupied forty minutes. The vault containing the body of John Paul Jones is draped in crepe. Over his coffin, which is visible through the broad grated doors at either end, are spread American flags. Outside paces an armed sentry.

IN THE LAND HE LOVED AIRSHIP FAILS TO FLY. BIG PAINTING ON VIEW.

Big Kite Succeeds Only in Turning Series of Somersaults.

After thirteen unsuccessful attempts to make his aerostat fly, Israel Ludlow last evening took it back to the place where it had been stored, assisted by a crowd of small boys, who had passed an enloyable afternoon, not altogether free from danger. Fully one thousand persons assembled along the waterfront, from West 79th to West 81st st. witness the experiments, which began at 4:40 e'clock. The aerostat had been stored in what was many years ago the country home of the Astors, From there it was hauled to the 80th-st. pier. Thirty feet of stout rope connected it with a powerful automobile, and when the aerostat had been ballasted with sand the automobile was

The "flying machine" scraped along the pier. wabbling from side to side, to the danger of men and boys who stood on the edges of the pier and who narrowly escaped being thrown into the water. At the third attempt the aerostat actually rose, curved upward for about twelve feet. The automobile was speeded, with the idea that the aerostat would soon be high in air, but it switched to the and snapped off the upper half of the flagstaff on the barge Kyankatanka, and then tumbled back on the pier.

"It needs live ballast," announced Philip Camp ell. of No. 206 West 47th-st. Campbell is a probell, of No. 208 West 47th-st. Campbell is a professional areconaut. He volunteered to take the place of the sand ballast, and while the aerostat was mounted on a second automobile he took his place in the kite. Then both machines were started off, and the kite rose a few feet, only, to fall and land Campbell between the aerostat and the automobile. When he disentangled himself he made another attempt, and this time the "flying machine" failed to fly, but landed Campbell in a sand heap on the pler. Women began to get nervous, and many left, fearing to see a tragedy. At the eleventh attempt the aerostat, without any passenger, rose to a height of fifty feet, but suddenly turned sideways, and, completing a somersault, fell to the street.

The thirteenth and last effort to make the ma-chine fly was begun at exactly 7:13 o'clock. The aerostal rose thirty feet in the air, turned a somer-sault and fell with a thud on the street. That ended the trials. A crowd of boys helped to right the machine and bear it to the store, where Mr. Ludlow said he would make several improvements before trying again. He said the main fault was the shifting of the ballast.

AIRSHIPS MAY NOT RACE.

Leo Stevens Criticises Knabenshue for Failing to Keep Appointment.

Leo Stevens, the aeronaut who is making ascen sions from Brighton Beach Park in the dirigible balloon California Arrow, and who was challenged race airships by Roy Knabenshue, of Toledo, said last night in regard to the proposed race:

Knabenshue challenged me, and I premptly accepted, for any distance up to five hundred miles and for any amount. I supposed that the matter was settled, except for the arrangement of details and the posting of forfelts, but I was unable to find Knabenshue in New-York to-day. I was told at his hotel, the Victoria, that my challenger had moved to the Glisey House, but the clerks there did not know him, and later I was told by a clerk at the Victoria that Knabenshue had paid his bill and gone back to Toledo.

Of course, I am very much disappointed in not being able to arrange the tace, and I am also indignant at Knabenshue's failure to keep his appointment. I am inclined to believe that he is suffering from "cold feet," and that he had not considered the velocity of the wind around New-York when he issued his challenge to me.

Wright Lorimer will start from his country place near White Plains to-day on a novel coaching tour ugh the Catskill Mountains. The trip will be made in the old stage coach which was once the pride of the actor's boyhood home in New-England Thirty years ago the coach ran between Barre and Worcester, Mass., and when Mr. Lorimer started out in the world his mother took him and his trunk to the roadside and put them aboard, Last year, when "The Shepherd King" was playing in Boston, the actor went to Worcester on a visit, and while there inquired for the old coach. He learned that it was in a junk shop, about to be broken up, and bought it for a song. The stage has been repaired and painted bright yellow and red, with the actor's moreogram on the doors.

Mr. Lorimer's guests will include Mr. and Mrs William A. Brady. Mrs. Lorimer and children, and the leading members of the company, including

Mr. Lorimer's general representative, J. F. Hall ut twelve in all. Mr. Lorimer will be the whip. The party will take the Albany Post Road to Poughkeepsie, where they will cross the bridge and go into the mountains. They will take cooking utensils and shelter tents and camp out at short stages. The trip will last about ten days, after which Mr. Lorimer will get ready for his opening in Hartford, August 1.

Historical Picture by Millet Destined for Minnesota Capitol.

Frank D. Millet has painted a large picture to hang in the Governor's Room of the new Capitol at St. Paul, Minn., which represents the signing of the Treaty of the Traverse between the United States and the Sloux Indians, July 23, 1851. There are about one hundred figures in the

The composition represents the signing of the treaty by the Indians, when, after three weeks of negotiation, the chiefs of about two thousand Indians present affixed their sign or signature to the document. The ceremony took place under a shelter of boughs built for protection from the sun. At one end of the shelter a platform was erected, and behind it was hung a piece of canvas for shade. In front and on the sides rough benches were built for the accommodation of the chiefs. Blankets, trinkets and powder were heaped up beneath the shelter, and in the middle stood a barrel of sugar and water, of which the Indians were exceedingly fond.

There were thirty-two white men present at the powwew, and many chiefs. The moment chosen by the artist is the time of signing not only the treaty, but the agreement to assign a certain proportion of the money paid for the land to satisfy the claims of traders with whom the Indians were deeply in debt.

The Indian Commissioner, Colonel Luke Lea, of Tennessee, and Governor Alexander Ramsey are standing on the platform behind a small table on which the treaty is spread, the former shaking hands with a chief in token of agree-ment, and the latter holding a medal to present to the chief after he has signed the paper. Seated behind these officials are various members of the party, and to the left, on the ground, with the second document spread out on a board on top of a barrel, two officials are directing the chiefs where to sign the agreement At the extreme left is a group of traders, mis-sionaries and one or two halfbreeds, and in the immediate foreground and in the shadow of the sheiter on the right are benches crowded with Indians, and a mass of spectators behind them. In the distance is a glimpse of the river, low wooded hills and numerous tepees, suggesting a large and populous encampment. The Indians are dressed in barbaric finery, with a great variety of ingeniously arranged head dresses, col-ored blankets and skins. Some of them carry pipes, others fans, and a few have brought their
